
The Great Wall of Mexico

The Mexican Wall

Trump's Election campaign in the year of 2016 had promised a Mexican Wall for the border of Mexico and the USA. Based on these promise, a lot of consideration needs to be taken. The best way to analyze is to work on the details for which the border needs to be corrected.

Here is some food for thought for the Mexican Wall:

1. Considering a rise of population among Hispanics in the USA, in the bracket of 12-15% of the total population, who do not vote, it may be a big factor in demographic dividend of people in the USA, post 2050, which can necessarily impede the construction of the Wall, and not to allow limited migrants in the USA to fill the 8-12 USD/ hour bracket in the USA.
2. Statistically, if 30-40 million people are in the USA without any voting rights, coming mainly from Guatemala, El Savador and Honduras, the Southern border of Mexico also needs to be filled with a Wall, so that, the migrants coming from these countries are treated fairly, inside the perimeters. It could mean a huge shift, in terms of wage and wage charges given in the USA.
3. Issuing of temporary visas for M-1, which supports basic amenities as medical and public schools, would be advantageous in the long run, where except any voting rights, work visa under the Homeland Security, would essentially enhance crime prevention and felony to a large extent. However, if closing the walls, gives a boost to macroeconomic indicators, it should also take care of micro indicators, as to take USA to a better wage spectrum, which essentially would mean raising inflation versus loosing on fiscal prudence. Given the burgeoning non-voting class, it could also mean a lot of population maths for those who really represent the population.
4. Statistically, felony, however small or large, committed as a crime, around the borders, or the drug menace slowly entering along the Mexican border, actually requires a dialogue, inviting the President of Mexico, in the White House. Drugs, in any quanta, flowing through the border or inside would actually destroy the real social fabric of any country, versus the unemployment rise.
5. Taking Republicans and Democrats into confidence, with USD 5-6 billion in cost for a impervious wall of 2,000 miles along the Southern states, can also entail a discussion, where Mexico can support the wall, in lieu of military and financial assistance of around USD 35 billion, where Mexico pledges a lot to work against the skimpy criminals, and builds a car industry in the Mexico instead of Detroit, and farmlands in Mexico, instead of a hard border agreements, and also a promise to build a Southern Mexican Wall.

With ISIS and Kurdish fighters drawing an end for a scaled withdrawal of troops, an alternate of NAFTA, where free trade agreement can be replaced with another agreement, where Canada, USA and Mexico can trade amongst each other, exchanging their best items, and also signing pacts related to borders, would also mean asking for not so costly labours to work in a new Detroit in Mexico or Canada. Relationship with neighbours, however strong a country is, needs to be revised periodically, in any context. People look for the USA as a responsible country, with a strong bias to guide the world, and we hope, that the USA does not support any cause only for its own. Military stand-off in Mexico can be asked by Mexico on an ad-hoc basis, but the only thought is, will the President of Mexico, the current President of the USA and Canada, sign a bonus for each other!
